

COVID UPDATE MARCH 2022

Whilst it is no longer a legal requirement for those who test positive with COVID-19 to self isolate, the NHS and Department for Education guidance stipulates that, should anyone test positive for Covid, they are required to self isolate. I appreciate that this is somewhat confusing given the Prime Minister's announcement. Although the law around self-isolation has changed, the guidance to remain in self-isolation remains in place. As we still have a number of children testing positive, please remember to follow this guidance. The information in the COVID UPDATE FEBRUARY 2022, including the test to release guidance remains in place.
